How to Destroy Catarrh Germs and End Catarrh Forever

Catarrh, according to a noted authority, is a germ disease and the only way to cure it so it will stay cured and never come back is to kill and drive out of your system the catarrhal germs which have found lodgment there. When the germs go the catarrh will stop.

There is nothing better for destroying catarrh germs than breathing into your nose and lungs the pleasant, soothing, healing, germ destroying air of Hyomei (pronounced High-o-mei) made from purest oil of Eucalyptus and combined with other powerful healing, antiseptic and germ destroying ingredients. Hyomei penetrates and heals the inflamed swollen membranes of your nose and throat, stops discharges, clears the passages and completely overcomes the disease by destroying its cause. For catarrh germs cannot live in your body after Hyomei reaches them. F. W. Jordan, Jr., and many other good druggists in Bedford and vicinity have long sold Hyomei on a positive guarantee of successful results or money back and find this generous policy pays.—Adv. 28 May 21.

Social Affair

One of the most successful social affairs of the season was given here May 21, from 2:30 to 6 o'clock p. m. by Mrs. James Andrew Shaffer in honor of Miss Mary Snyder. The house was beautifully decorated throughout, the color scheme being pink and white. The rooms were adorned with pink and white festooning. The portiers likewise were pink and white, while along the balustrade was woven pink and white crepe paper. The windows were darkened and candles and electric lights gave an added charm to the occasion.

As the guests arrived they were met by three small girls, dressed also in pink and white, who ushered them up stairs to remove their wraps and thence to the parlor where all were entertained by the grafanola for awhile.

During the afternoon there appeared a lady who seemingly had not received an invitation to the affair but came nevertheless. From her outward appearance she resembled a lady of 1850 and was introduced by the hostess as "Mrs. Gookins." The strange lady seemed bewildered when she beheld that grand assemblage but suddenly her face lightened as she saw the hostess. She felt more at her ease as she handed Miss Replogle a large envelope containing a letter. After Miss Replogle read the letter she arose and read it aloud for the benefit of the crowd which proved to be an announcement of Miss Snyder's engagement to Roy Wissinger of Tunneton.

During the course of the afternoon the guests worked Miss Snyder an outline quilt and also tendered her a miscellaneous shower.

The prospective bride was ushered under the electric light in the archway where she opened and admired the numerous and beautiful presents, after which elaborate refreshments were served by the three small girls who met the guests upon arriving, namely: Katharine Markey, Dorothy Biddle and Ina Snively. The cake, candy, ice cream and all the other dainties in the eatable line were pink and white.

Before leaving for home the hostess presented each guest with a heart shaped picture of the bride, a beautiful carnation and a pink souvenir basket.

At 6 p. m. the guests departed for their homes thanking the hostess for her kindness and wishing Miss Snyder a happy and joyous married life.

"Dr. Thomas' Eclectic Oil is the best remedy for that often fatal disease—croup. It has been used with success in our family for eight years."—Mrs. L. Whiteacre, Buffalo, N. Y.—Adv.

WE MUST GO FORWARD!

In the good old days, when Roosevelt and Taft and Aldrich and Cannon were running the government, there was no end of "prosperity."

The Steel Trust, the Harvester Trust, the Copper Trust, the Beef Trust, the Powder Trust, the Armor Plate Trust, and the lesser trusts were really doing very well.

Organ and Harriman and Mellon and all the old boys were working the ball-bearing, frictionless merger without a jar.

We had a top notch tariff and everybody was having a good time—except the people.

There was a demand for labor, at a living wage. Farm products sold at fair prices. Business was booming. New mills were built. New mines were opened. New inventions, new processes stimulated our industrial system day by day. Electricity, chemistry, all the forces of nature, were made to serve in reducing the element of hand labor entering into every product. Machinery, responding with marvelous facility to the touch of the skilled operative, converted raw material into the finished product, performing the task that only yesterday required scores of human hands.

The cost of manufacture was steadily reduced. But the cost of living steadily increased. It became burdensome to every family of moderate means. The wage earner felt it first and most keenly. He found it harder and harder to make his earnings meet his bills. Stronger and stronger came the pressure to put the children into factory service.

As season followed season, it seemed that the limit must soon be reached. It was against reason that it should go higher, when every factor of cost was being lowered. Machines were speeding up. Men were speeding up. Discipline was stricter, organization better, profits to capital increasing. But for some mysterious reason, the cost of living continued to soar. Why was it that the prosperity, with which the country seemed to be teeming, did not benefit the common people? Everybody except the very rich was made to feel the pinch. There was industry and earnest endeavor everywhere, but only a few seemed to be getting ahead.

Conditions became intolerable. The people began to do a little practical thinking. It did not require much. The high tariff, excluding foreign competition, gave the American market to the American manufacturer. The centralized control of our domestic manufacture made it possible, through trust agreements, to suppress home competition and advance prices. And the consumer was compelled to pay the prices and the profits demanded.

Once clearly understood, the people refused to submit to the increasing burden. They demanded a reduction of the tariff in order to secure reasonable foreign competition. And they demanded the enforcement of the law against trusts in order to restore domestic competition.

But the trusts and combinations were entrenched in government. They were determined to maintain the high tariff, exclude foreign competition, perpetuate trust agreements and continue their control of prices. They were on good terms with the President, with Aldrich, and with Cannon. They were the chief supporters of the administration at the National Capital. They were heavy financial contributors to national campaigns.

Is it strange, in the light of the relations which existed between those in authority and the bosses of Big Business that when tariff revision was ultimately forced upon them by the people under the Taft administration, the trusts and combinations were strong enough to revise the tariff upward instead of downward? The people had petitioned and demanded Republican tariff revision. Being denied and denied again and again, finally in their wrath they voted for Democratic tariff revision, and entrusted a Democratic administration to break the grip of monopoly.

President Wilson at once addressed himself to the great undertaking committed to him by the American people. And it was a great undertaking to reduce the tariff, and to grapple with organized monopoly, in control of markets and prices. These privileged interests were certain to be resentful of any interference with their enormous profits. They had acquired such a mastery over the country and its business that they could make good times or bad times by a beck or a nod.

President Wilson convened Congress. The tariff was reduced. The tariff beneficiaries resisted. They threatened to strike back. How much of the business depression which followed tariff revision was due to retaliation for tariff revision, and how much to the readjustment necessarily resulting from tariff revision, is not material. The interests could afford a small per cent. of loss on a manufactured depression in order to restore monopoly profits for another long high tariff period. But the revision of the tariff by the Wilson administration furnished no substantial reason for business depression of a radical or general character. It was in no sense a Democratic tariff for-revenue bill. Excepting upon agricultural products and a few of the more highly finished manufactures, duties were made to measure the difference between the cost of domestic and foreign production.

Falling Hair or Itching Scalp

Now that Parisian Sage—an inexpensive preparation that supplies every hair and scalp need—can be had from F. W. Jordan, Jr., it is certainly needless to have thin, brittle, matted, stringy or faded hair. No matter how unightly your hair, how badly it is falling, or how much dandruff, Parisian Sage is all that is needed. Every trace of dandruff is removed with one application, the hair roots are nourished and stimulated to grow new hair, itching scalp and falling hair cease.

Parisian Sage is certainly one of the most invigorating tonics, and will surely make your hair soft, abundant and radiant with life and beauty.

WHY YOU ARE NERVOUS

The nervous system is the alarm system of the human body.

In perfect health we hardly realize that we have a nerve system, but when health ebbs, when strength is declining, the same nervous system gives the alarm in headaches, tiredness, dizziness, sleep, irritability and unless corrected, leads straight to a breakdown.

To correct nervousness, Scott's Emulsion is exactly what you should take; its rich nutriment gets into the blood and rich blood feeds the tiny nerve-cells, while the whole system responds to its refreshing tonic force. It is free from alcohol.

Scott & Bowne, Bloomfield, N. J.

tic and foreign production. Setting aside partisan politics, and taken as a whole, it was a measure which any Republican could honestly and conscientiously support.

But the trust bosses of the country have their reasons to be resentful of recent legislation. A Trades Commission was established. This Commission is empowered and directed to prevent the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce and industry. The wise exercise of this and other powers conferred upon the Commission cannot fail to afford much relief to the public and to honest business suffering from unfair methods and practices at the hands of unscrupulous corporations.

To the extent that it is necessary to uproot unlawful practices, to restore honest competitive business methods, those who are engaged in unlawful practices will always complain. With the predatory interests believing in the divine right of monopoly, they regard the public as their lawful spoil. Whatever interferes with their methods or disarranges their system, is regarded as a disturbance of legitimate business. So long as they keep labor employed at a living wage, they maintain their right to destroy competition and tax transportation all the traffic will bear, corrupt government, and destroy democracy. Hence they are quite as bitter and resentful against the Wilson administration as though it had completely freed the government from every tyranny. In fact, it has only made a beginning. It has by no means accomplished all that it was authorized to do by the votes of the electorate of the country.

The business of this country has suffered depression. Thousands of men have been out of employment. But one-half of the world's population is at war. During most of the period covered by this awful conflict our overseas shipping has been almost wholly suspended. Our foreign trade aggregating nearly four thousand million dollars has been in an utterly chaotic condition for nearly a year. The commerce of every neutral nation has suffered enormously.

Who shall say that existing business conditions in this country are due to tariff revision or to the legislation enacted to restrain trusts and prohibit the unfair practices of powerful business organizations?

Republican voters have no cause to complain of the Wilson administration on the score that it has revised the tariff downward. Republicans voted for tariff revision downward in 1908, again in 1910, and yet again in 1912.

A majority of the voters of all parties have for years demanded that the power of monopoly be broken and the markets of our country freed from trust control.

We must go forward, not backward. The next administration must be more progressive, not less progressive.

The Standpat Republican hails with joy the slightest evidence of business depression. Reactionary businessmen who had accepted retirement from public life as inevitable in 1912, are looking forward with hope toward 1916. They long for a restoration of the good old days. They want prosperity—for the trusts and combinations.

Let the enlightened voters of progressive America beware! Are they ready to turn the clock back? Do they want to resurrect Hanna and Harriman and Aldrich? Will they call in the Old Guard, re-enact the Payne-Aldrich tariff, give the railroads what they want, give Big Business a free hand to suppress competition, and take what profit it will—that is what it would mean to return to the good old days.

THE CHINCH-BUG PEST

Cleaning Up and Burning Waste Vegetation and the Erection of Simple Barriers Best Methods of Control.

The burning of waste vegetation in the early winter and the construction of some form of barrier about harvest time are recommended by the department as the most satisfactory methods of controlling the chinch bug. This pest is declared to be one of it not the worst insect enemies that the American grain farmer has to combat. It is said, indeed, that if it were not for an occasional season of heavy rains at the right moment the chinch bug would make it altogether unprofitable to raise grain year after year on the same acres. Drenching rains during the hatching season, however, prove fatal to the young and such wet periods are sufficiently frequent to keep the numbers of the pest within bounds.

There are two forms of the chinch bug, known, respectively, as the long-winged and the short-winged. The short-winged form occurs along the seacoast and inland along the lower lakes to northern Illinois. The long-winged form is found all over the country east of the Rocky Mountains and is especially abundant in the Middle West, the section which suffers the most from the chinch bug.

The long-winged chinch bug has two generations a year, while it is doubtful whether the short-winged has one or two. The adult insects pass the winter under slumps of broom-sedge, matted grass, leaves, or in fact any convenient form of waste vegetation, from which they emerge in the spring to deposit their eggs in nearby grain fields. When the young hatch from the eggs they cluster upon the plants and begin at once to feed upon the juices. Shortly after midsummer this first generation have become adults and deposit their eggs in turn. When these eggs are hatched the young fasten on corn, millet, kafir, and similar crops.

To control the pest, therefore, a new publication of the department, "Farmers' Bulletin No. 837," "The Chinch Bug," recommends in the first place the cleaning up of all fence rows and roadsides, and the burning during winter of grass and rubbish about the farm. This not only destroys large numbers of the bugs but deprives them of shelter through the winter, so that where the work is thoroughly done comparatively few will survive the breeding season. In the fall or spring green or wet grass will shelter a certain proportion of the bugs from the fire, so it is important that the burning be done in the early winter.

Where this precaution has been neglected or where the negligence of a neighbor has exposed a farmer to loss through no fault of his own, there may be about midsummer a great migration of the bugs from the wheat to the cornfield. This presents another favorable opportunity to destroy the pests. Various kinds of barriers are in use to turn the invading army aside, one of the most satisfactory of these is said to be the coal-tar line, supplemented with post-holes. The bugs will not cross the coal tar, and moving along the line of the barrier fall or are crowded by other bugs into the postholes, where they can be killed at will. As the bugs mass along the line of coal tar they present an appearance not unlike a reddish-brown stream running into the postholes. This method has been found thoroughly practical. It is important, however, especially in dusty weather, to keep the coal tar line fresh, for as soon as it is covered with dirt the bugs can pass over it without difficulty. If coal tar is not available petroleum or road oil may be substituted.

Another method is to plow a furrow around the field to be protected with a side so steep that the bugs cannot crawl out of it. In the case of showery weather when the sides of the furrow cannot be kept loose and dry, the bottom can be cleaned out with a shovel, making the sides more perpendicular and the bottom smoother. The bugs will then follow along the bottom instead of trying to climb out of the furrow, and if holes are dug at intervals of 30 or 40 feet the pests will fall into them and can then be killed by kerosene. The coal tar line is probably preferable to the furrow except in cases of excessively dry, windy weather.

The necessity of these precautions is shown by the fact that on one farm of 250 acres a coal tar line 90

KIDNEY TROUBLE CAUSES INTENSE SUFFERING

Sixteen years ago I was taken sick with kidney trouble and suffered terribly for three months. I did not work during this time and was mostly confined to the bed. After using other remedies I finally tried a bottle of Swamp-Root. I immediately began to feel better, and after using seven fifty-cent bottles, was entirely cured and have had no kidney trouble since. I can truly say that I owe my good health to Swamp-Root. rods in length resulted in the death of eight gallons of chinch bugs. In another case 300 yards of bar lines with their accompanying post holes yielded a harvest of 10 bushels, and at one point on the line a 6-gallon jar was filled with the pests in less than half a day. The seriousness of the plague, however, varies greatly from year to year, chiefly on account of the weather conditions. As has already been pointed out, heavy rains at the hatching season will greatly reduce the numbers of the bugs. When such rains come, therefore, it makes comparatively little difference how many of the adult bugs have wintered in the neighborhood; there will be very few left to attack the crops. On the other hand, a succession of dry seasons may bring forth a devastating horde that will cause the farmer irreparable loss. In 1864, for example, which was an especially bad year, it was estimated that throughout large areas three-fourths of the wheat and one-half of the corn crop was destroyed, the total loss amounting to about 30,000,000 bushels of wheat and 138,000,000 bushels of corn.

Wet weather is instrumental in keeping down the pest in another way, for it promotes the growth of fungus disease, which is one of the principal natural enemies of the chinch bug. One fungus, known as the chinch bug fungus, is frequently artificially introduced into localities where there is an overabundance of the bugs, and in wet weather unquestionably does much to keep down the pest.

Another enemy is the bobwhite or quail which more than any other bird feeds upon the bug. Unfortunately, the quail is slaughtered in large numbers as a game bird and its usefulness therefore much impaired. With a better appreciation of its services, it is probable that more efficient protective laws will be passed in States where the chinch bug is a serious evil.

Prove it Yourself by Buying a Box of Tonoline Tablets Now.

"By George, I never saw anything like the effects of that new treatment, Tonoline Tablets, for building up of weight and lost nerve force. It acted more like a miracle than a medicine," said a well-known gentleman yesterday in speaking of the revolution that had taken place in his condition. "I began to think that there was nothing on earth that could make me fat. I tried tonics, digestives, heavy eating, diets, milk, beer and almost everything else you could think of, but without result."

Any man or woman who is thin can recover normal weight by the best new treatment, Tonoline Tablets. "I have been thin for years and began to think it was natural for me to be that way. Finally I read about the remarkable processes brought about by use of Tonoline Tablets, decided to try them myself. Well, when I look at myself in the mirror now, I think it is somebody else. I have put on just forty pounds during the last forty days, and never felt stronger or more 'nervy' in my life."

Tonoline Tabs are a powerful inducer to nutrition, increases cell-growth, food, increases the number of blood-corpuscles and as a necessary result builds up muscles, and solid healthy flesh, and rounds out the figure.

For women who can never appear stylish in anything they wear because of their thinness this remarkable treatment may prove a revelation. It is a beauty maker as well as a form builder and nerve strengthener. Tonoline Tabs cost $1 for a 50-days' treatment, at druggists, or mailed by American Proprietary Company, Boston, Mass.—Adv. 14 May 4t.

INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

(By E. O. SELLERS, Acting Director of Sunday School Course of Moody Bible Institute, Chicago.)

LESSON FOR MAY 30

BRINGS ARK TO JERUSALEM.

LESSON TEXT—II Samuel 6:12-19 and Psalm 24. (Study all of chapter 6.)
GOLDEN TEXT—I was glad when they said unto me, "Let us go unto the house of the Lord."—Psalm 122:1.

This event probably occurred B. C. 1042, in the twenty-second year of David's reign. It would be a good plan to assign to various pupils such subjects as: (a) What the ark was and how it came to be lost; (b) Where it had been since the days of Joshua; (c) What occurred to it while in possession of the Philistines; (d) Who was Obed-edom? (e) Uzziah? (f) Michal? (g) How Jerusalem came to be the seat of government.

I. The Ark Recovered, vv. 1-5. David realized that while God was the God of all the tribes, still there was no visible religious center; there was the consequent danger of confounding the local place of worship with that of some local Baal (god) and the possible breaking up of the national reliance upon Jehovah. Where Kir-jath-jearim was is not definitely known, but perhaps it was eight or ten miles west of Jerusalem. The ark had lodged here for perhaps seventy years. David and they that were with him followed the example of the Philistines (I Sam. 6:1-18) in their mode of transferring the ark rather than to have it carried upon the shoulders of the priests (Josh. 3:3). Preceded by "David and the house of Israel," i. e., leaders of the people and all others present, they began the return journey from the house of Abinadab.

II. The Ark Retarded, vv. 6-11. They had reached one of the open places used as a threshing floor when the oxen slipped and the cart was shaken. Uzziah, one of the two into whose charge it had been placed, laid hold of the ark to keep it from falling. Why was he slain therefore? We have already suggested the reason. How to carry the ark was plainly written (Num. 4:5-12; 7:9). Neglect of God's word gets many well-meaning people into trouble, along with their friends, also. The ark was the symbol of God's presence, and men had to be taught to reverence his holy name and his glorious presence (see last clause v. 2). Uzziah's sin was the sin of irreverence. He seems not to have sensed the invisible God in his visible abode. The result struck terror into the heart of David and the people, and the ark was left in the house of Obed-edom for a period of three months. David's "improved plan" was a proved failure.

III. The Ark Restored, vv. 9-19. David, by thus abandoning the ark, seems to have resented the judgment of God, yet he must have realized that God had sufficient cause for his acts. The ark is a type of Christ, who is Immanuel, God with us. The ark contained the law of God, as Christ enshrined the will of his Father. Over the law was the blood-sprinkled mercy seat where God met his people (Ex. 25:18-22). In Christ we find our mercy seat where we meet God. Though this ark brought judgment to Uzziah it brought blessing to Obed-edom (v. 12). Even so Christ brings judgment or joy according to our treatment of him. Obed-edom so piously cared for the ark that both he and his household were richly blessed. If Christ is really in our hearts we will be blessed, and Christ abideth forever.

IV. The Psalm of Praise, Ps. 24. In the Jewish synagogue this psalm is recited at the carrying back of the ark to the law to its shrine, and in the Greek church at the consecration of the church. The twenty-second psalm presents the suffering Savior; the twenty-third presents the risen Savior as the shepherd caring for and leading his sheep, and the twenty-fourth tells of the reigning, glorified Lord. The whole earth is Jehovah's (v. 1) and no incident better teaches the converse, viz., that he is God of the earth and not a mere tribal deity. He "founded" and "established" it, and all "the fullness," and "they that dwell therein" are his by creative and redemptive right. Since we belong to him we owe him worship and service—and a servant is one who "stands" v. 3). The conditions of fellowship with Jehovah are "clean hands and a pure heart" (v. 4), those who deal with honesty and reverence. "Vanity" and "idolatry" are frequently synonymous terms.

The first and the fourth condition relate to others, the second and the third to one's inner life (see I John 1:6, 7).

The reward of acceptable worship and service is "blessing from the Lord" (v. 5). In verse eight we find Israel's great name for God first used in the Psalms.

He is gloriously strong, this Lord of the hosts of heaven.

In I Cor. 2:8, Jesus who was crucified is called the "Lord of Glory." Even so our coming King is "strong and Mighty" and will prove himself "mighty in battle" (see Rev. 19:11-21).

When he, the King of Glory, leads captivity captive all of his followers will have a part in that triumphal entry.

"It is the soft, mild leaf of PICNIC TWIST that is so satisfying. It does not possess the de-

The sweetness of PICNIC TWIST—its long lasting chew appeals to the men who know GOOD chewing tobacco.

THE CARE OF WOUNDS

Little Talks on Health and Hygiene by Samuel G. Dixon, M. D.

The scratch of a poisoned ring was often sufficient to effectually dispose of an enemy during the Middle Ages. Such procedure is no longer fashionable and many people are careless in neglecting slight wounds not thinking them worthy of consideration.

It is easily possible for any cut or abrasion which is sufficient to draw blood to become infected with possible serious results. Not that one should worry over a cut finger or the like, but there are certain precautions which should be given to even the slightest wounds.

This is because through puncture, scratch or cut some of the many micro-organisms may find entrance and result in infection. As these little trouble makers are found everywhere and are apt to be on almost anything we touch it is obvious that some protection should be given any open wound.

First however, the wound should be cleansed, preferably with water which has been boiled. After this is done some antiseptic should be applied. A 2% solution of carbolic acid or tincture of iodine applied around the edge and directly in the cut will satisfactorily disinfect smaller wounds and can be easily obtained. A piece of sterile gauze or linen should then be applied.

The wound should not be hermetically sealed as many of the most dangerous infecting agents are those which only thrive when the air is shut away. Among these is the germ of the dreaded tetanus or lockjaw. For this reason court plaster should not be used.

It is wise for travelers, campers and vacationists to provide themselves with sterilized bandages before starting on a trip. These are put up in convenient and compact form and are a material aid in caring for wounds. In case sterile bandages are not at hand linen can be sterilized by pressing on both sides with a very hot iron or by dipping in some antiseptic solution.

Deep cuts and wounds of a more serious nature should always be treated by a surgeon.

For any itching skin trouble, piles, eczema, salt rheum, hives, itch, scald head, herpes, scabies, Doan's Ointment is highly recommended. 50c a box at all stores.—Adv.

The Veterans

Every year they're marching slower. Every year they're stooping lower. Every year the lilting music. Stirs the hearts of older men: Every year the flags above them seem to bend and bless and love them As if grieving for the future When they'll never march again. Every year that day draws nearer: Every year the truth is clearer That the men who saved the nation From the severing fatal sword, Soon must pass away forever. From the scene of their endeavor, Soon must answer to the roll call Of the angel of the Lord. Every year with dwindling number, Loyal still to those that slumber, Forth they march to where already Many have found rest at last, And they place the fairest blossoms Of the silent, mould'ring bosoms Of the valiant friends and comrades Of the battles of the past. Every year grown dimmer, duller, Tattered flags and faded color, Every year the hands that bear them Find a harder task to do; And the eyes that always brightened, When the blaze of battle lightened, Like the tattered flags they follow, Have grown dim and faded too. Every year we see them massing, Every year we watch them passing (Scarcely pausing in our hurry—After pleasure, after gain); But the battle flags above them Seem to bend and bless and love them, And through all the lilting music Sobs an undertone of pain. —Denis R. McCarthy, in N. Y. Sun.

MEETS DEATH IN FALL

Simon K. Frederick, Formerly of Woodbury, Fatally Injured in Altoona.

Plunging from the top of a twenty-foot ladder while engaged in painting near the roof of the interior of No. 1 Erecting Shop, Altoona, shortly after 7 o'clock Saturday morning Simon K. Frederick of that city sustained injuries which resulted in his death at the Altoona Hospital Saturday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock.

Mr. Frederick had just started to work and was climbing to the top of the ladder carrying a paint bucket in one hand. When near the top of the ladder he accidentally lost his balance and fell to the shop floor, a distance of twenty feet.

He sustained a fracture of the left clavicle and left wrist and other injuries to the head and body. He never regained consciousness. The exact cause of the accident is unknown but it is believed that he lost his balance while reaching for a rung of the ladder with his free hand, this causing the fall.

He is survived by his wife and three children, Jesse, Muriel and Mildred, all at home. His aged father, John B. Frederick, of near Henrietta and the following brothers and sisters survive: Adam of Taylor Township, Blair County; Samuel of Hollidaysburg, Homer of Henrietta, Mrs. Samuel Wisler of Martinsburg and Mrs. J. W. Shelly of Waynesboro. He was a faithful member of the Church of God.

Funeral services were held at his late home Monday evening at 8 o'clock. The body was brought to Roaring Spring Tuesday morning and taken to the Holsinger Church of the Brethren, near Baker's Summit, where funeral services were conducted by his pastor, Rev. Charles F. Reitzel of the First Church of God, Altoona. Interment was made in the adjoining cemetery. The pall bearers were shopmates and Bible classmates of Altoona, Messrs. Eastright, Lebeck, Apple, Whitaker, Ebright and Ehrman.

Mr. Frederick was born a short distance east of Woodbury on the farm owned now by Levi J. Imbler on December 9, 1872, being aged 42 years, five months and six days. His mother, whose maiden name was Sarah Kauffman, passed over to the Spiritual World about 34 years ago. Mr. Frederick worked on the farm and also did some painting. About sixteen years ago he was united in marriage with Miss Loretta Helsel, a daughter of John and Jane Helsel of near Lafayetteville. They began housekeeping in Altoona since which time he was an employee of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company.

Better Paint

Better isn't enough; paint best. A man bought "cheap" paint; saved 20c or 30 or 40 or 50c a gallon, didn't he?

Yes, and bought 40 or 50 or 60 or 80 percent more gallons; how much did he make on his paint?

And he paid for painting those gallons—a fair day's work is a gallon—how much did he make on the labor part of his job?

He lost a quarter or third of his money.

How long will it last? not his money, the paint?

Perhaps half as long as Devoe. How long will his money last, if he buys other stuff as he bought that paint?

Better buy the best paint; it makes the least bill and least-often.

Capacity Always Within Call.
It is certainly true that no one knows the resources of his own mind and body until some great sense of duty comes to him, rousing him to play his part well in the work of life.

There are unused capacities in brain and nervous system, in mind and moral nature that are capable of development and effective use. Who knows the potentiality of life force in himself until he gives it opportunity for full expression?—Exchange.

Bedford Co. Sportman's Association

The Bedford County Sportman's Association held a meeting at the Court House, in Bedford, Friday evening, May 21, for the purpose of organization. James E. Cleaver was elected President, Harry C. James, Esq., Secretary, and Harvey G. Davidson, Treasurer.

On account of the very inclement weather delegations from various sections of the county were prevented from attending the meeting and for this reason it was decided not to make choice of additional officers until the next meeting when the whole county could be represented. About fifty persons attended the meeting, however a very successful start was made. The Committee on Constitution and By-Laws is at work and will report the same to the next meeting for approval. A number of addresses were made by members of the Association.

About 9 o'clock two automobile loads of officers of the United Sportsmen of Pennsylvania from Johnstown and Scranton arrived and gave some very interesting talks on the purpose of the organization. They showed how both the State and National government were interested in and aided associations of this character, the purpose of which is the advancement of the interests of fish, game and forestry, the raising of the standard of sportsmanship among the fishermen and hunters of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania; to aid the fishery, game and forestry authorities in framing, passing and maintaining proper laws for the protection and increase of fish, game and forests, including song birds and such birds as are most beneficial to the farmer and all other beneficial wild life.

It is the purpose of this organization to stock all streams and forests in those localities of the county which are represented in the association. There is but one way to obtain this supply of game and fish and that is through an association organized for the protection of fish and game. Forty individuals applications from Bedford County last year did not bring a single fish to this county, while at the same time the association at Johnstown obtained since January 1, 1915, three car loads of deer, two car loads of six inch trout, five flocks of wild turkeys, two hundred and fifty thousand blue gills, two hundred pairs of quail, eighty pairs of ring necked pheasants, which was all the association asked for.

The next meeting will be held at the Court House, Bedford, Tuesday evening, June 1st, at 8 o'clock. All persons interested in the waters, forests and wild life of the county should be present at this meeting. Over two hundred persons have already expressed their desire to join this movement.

The Store of Quality and Service

WASHINGTON LETTER

Communication From Our Regular Correspondent.

Washington, D. C., May 25.—Italy's entrance into the war set in motion various branches of official and diplomatic activity. Count V. Macchi di Cellere, the Italian Ambassador, formally notified the United States of the declaration of war on Austria by his government. Dr. Constantine T. Dumba, the Austrian Ambassador, conferred with Secretary Bryan and also advised him of the existence of a state of war between his country and Italy. A neutrality proclamation similar to those made early in the war was formally issued; and Secretary Bryan announced that the American embassy at Vienna had taken over the care of Italian interests there. The United States will act for Austria in Serbia and in Cairo, Egypt, where Italy has hitherto acted for Austria.

One of the things that most interests officials here is whether the thousands of Italians in this country who are liable to military service will be summoned home at once. It is accepted that most of them will respond voluntarily. This will affect the United States more than it has been up to the present time. None of the other belligerent nations recalled any great number of its subjects in the United States to the colors. But the Italians in the last few years have had practically a monopoly on construction work in this country, and if they return home to fight there is bound to be a famine in the so-called common labor market. On the other hand, it is the opinion of many diplomatic and other officials that the entrance of Italy into the European war will operate in the near future to the great benefit of American commerce.

The end of the present week may now see the German reply to President Wilson's note on the Lusitania incident delivered in Washington. Officials remain hopeful as to the outcome, but they look forward to lengthy diplomatic exchanges and are not optimistic that the difficulties will be speedily adjusted. They feel certain that Germany does not desire to drag America into war. It is largely because of this belief and not because of any specific information as to what the German reply will be, that there is a more cheerful feeling in Administration circles. Officers take the view that if Berlin is as desirous as the United States of avoiding a clash, diplomatic adjustment is not confronted with insuperable obstacles.

The Swiss Legation here has issued a denial of published reports that the government of Switzerland had made strong representations to Germany regarding her submarine operations. These reports asserted that three Swiss citizens were killed in the sinking of the Lusitania. The legation denies that any Swiss citizens were lost with the Lusitania so far as is known.

Officials here most familiar with the inner workings of the British government since the beginning of the war believe they see a real prospect of the forthcoming reorganization of the British cabinet bringing about conditions more satisfactory to American interests. Representatives of the chief meat packing firms of the United States are in Washington to discuss with government officials the grievances which they have against the British government on account of detention and seizures of American meat cargoes. While the packers consider they have serious ground for complaint they have repudiated reports to the effect that in retaliation the American firms would refuse to sell to Great Britain. If the meat packing houses were to carry to its logical conclusion a policy of holding up all meat exports to Great Britain until that country adopts a more reasonable attitude towards American commerce, they would be making use of a powerful weapon and would earn the gratitude of the American people.

The suggestion of Secretary of State Bryan of a new note to Great Britain immediately, it is understood, was flatly rejected by the President. The Administration insists on handling one issue at a time and will not permit that issue to be clouded. What is believed by statesmen to be an epoch-making event in the history of the New World was begun here last Monday morning when President Wilson, surrounded by members of his cabinet and other high government officials, including the federal reserve board and the federal trade commission, welcomed to Washington the official delegates of eighteen other American republics, gathered for the purpose of trying to solve some of the problems brought to the American republics by the European war. William Gibbs McAdoo, Secretary of the Treasury, is given credit for having inspired and carried into execution this conference, which will doubtless go down into history as the Pan-American Financial Conference.

President Wilson, in addressing the delegates, laid stress upon the necessity of drawing the American republics together, in view of the European war, in the bonds of commercial interest and mutual understanding. He declared that one thing stands in the way of closer intercourse between the American nations—the need of ships—and the foreign delegates, it was noted, greatly applauded him when he said, "If private capital cannot remedy this situation, the government must." These words, coupled with the known attitude of some of the cabinet, were interpreted in official quarters as indicating that the ship purchase bill would be brought out as one of the administration measures when the next Congress convenes.

In the unprecedented case of the Riggs National Bank against the Secretary of the Treasury, the Comptroller of the Currency and the United States Treasurer, Justice McCoy, of the District Supreme Court, in effect rejected that part of the bank's complaint alleging "persecution" by Treasury officials. He took under advisement, however, the validity of the $5,000 fine assessed against the bank by Comptroller Williams, which precipitated the bank's action. Justice McCoy asserted substantially that he found no evidence of a display of malice and persecution by the Treasury officials; and while continuing in force the restraining order as to the $5,000 fine, he denied all other prayers for relief. His decision as to the validity of the fine is expected about July 1.

President Wilson will speak Monday, Memorial day, at Arlington, having accepted an invitation there some time ago.

A brilliant reception was given by the Secretary of State and Mrs. Bryan in inaugurating the week's entertainment for the delegates to the Pan-American conference. The reception was given at the Pan-American building and there were present more than 800 guests. Among the decorations were the flags of all the Americas. Receiving with the Secretary and Mrs. Bryan were all the cabinet officers now in Washington and their wives.

The affair as planned by Mrs. Snyder was to be a surprise for her husband, and for proof that she fully succeeded in carrying out her plans you need only ask Mr. Snyder himself, who suspected nothing until his return from Loysburg, where his wife had induced him earlier in the evening to take her. He was about to enter his home when a flashlight was thrown on him by one of the parties inside. Mr. Snyder at once surrendered, and the remainder of the evening was pleasantly spent; a sumptuous supper partaken of, and all returned to their homes well pleased, wishing Mr. Snyder many more happy returns of his natal day.

Keiper, in Woodbury Borough May 21, 1915, at the age of 67 years, nine months and 14 days, after an illness of about six months' duration of a complication of diseases.

Being left fatherless at the age of eight years, she lived and grew to womanhood at the home of Isaac Replogle at Waterside, who has long since gone to his reward.

In the fall of 1869 she was united in marriage to Jacob S. Keiper of Pattonville (now known as Loysburg), who preceded her to the spirit world about fourteen years ago.

Carper and Samuel Ake of Roaring Spring, Mrs. William Mauk and William Ake of Martinsburg, George Ake of Altoona and Frank of Clinton, Ia.

themselves as members of our organization. It doesn't seem right for one lot of men to do the work and then have those who won't turn a hand to help, have them help reap the reward of our labors. It looks like the wrong thing to me, but we have always had that kind of people.

Our Memorial service program is progressing nicely. Notice will appear in another column. The one great lament seems to be the removal of Brother Hermann. We are sorry and glad both. We are sorry to lose him from our Grange but we feel confident he will continue to be a booster of any good work whether religious or civic, and we realize it is going to be a problem for us to find another worker, for the uplift of rural life, that will be his equal. But we are glad he is on the line of advancement and all join in wishing him God speed. This Memorial service will be the last of his public work in this community and the indications are that there will be a grand turn out of all people to shake hands with him and wish him well at Scranton.

Grange Notes
We were very glad to notice that "ye editor" has become a Granger in fact as well as in thought. In discussing this item we find that nearly every resident of rural communities are Grangers in sympathy. Many rural residents understand that it is only by organization that they can obtain the things necessary to the comforts of rural life, such as rural mail delivery, parcel post, etc. These things were only obtained by demand of organized bodies, of which the Grange was leader by far of any other order. Now along this line we expect to formulate our ideas for future publication of the Rural Credit Law that should be passed by the next Congress.

Now if all the farmers who are paying six per cent. interest on farm mortgages, would stop and think what the Grange is trying to do for them along this line they would not hesitate a minute about enrolling

FOR FLETCHER'S

CASTORIA

IN HONOR OF DEAD

Practically Every Country Has Day Set Apart for Solemn Observances.

THE custom of strewing flowers on the graves of the soldiers originated in the South. Even before the Civil war was over the women in the South, where skies are warmer and temperaments more poetic than in the practical North, formed the habit of scattering flowers on the graves of the dead.

Days set apart for festivals in honor of the dead are found among all nations. The Chinese, Japanese, and even our druidical ancestors had or have such days.

The Romans commemorated a similar occasion and called it "Parentalia." With them it lasted eight days. But the Romans loved holidays. They finally accumulated so many in the course of the year that the law was forced to restrict the number.

Mass of Brilliant Colors.

There is a strong contrast in the way this day is observed in different countries. In France the "Jour des Morts," Day of the Dead, as it is called, is a pathetic and beautiful occasion. For two or three weeks before the day arrives the shop windows are laden with wreaths of immortelles, some in their natural color and some dyed blue, pink, or purple. When the day arrives the people stream to the cemeteries.

Thousands of people, thousands of wreaths! The cemeteries are one mass of brilliant color, of moving throngs, for not even the remotest part of the potter's field is neglected.

In Naples this day, celebrated there as All Saints day, is regarded as a holiday, and the visit of the families to the churchyard becomes a pleasure party. Metal garlands are chiefly used, and though they are more durable, they do not possess the charm of real flowers.

In some of the villages in southern Italy the grotesqueness and realism of the observance is painful. Ravello, a mountain village overlooking the sea, and one of the most beautiful spots in the world, has a unique and revolting custom. A wax figure representing Death, dressed in the court costume of some previous century, with red stockings and pointed shoes, is brought into the church during the services. The beauty and peace of Ravello's wonderful surroundings do not find outward expression in their feeling toward their dead.

Forecast of Coming Deaths.

In Austria it is the faith of the peasantry that on All Soul's eve at midnight anyone visiting the cemetery will see a procession of the dead drawing after them those who are to die during the coming year.

A gloomy drama founded on this is acted every year in the People's theater in Vienna. The miller has a beautiful daughter, the daughter a lover; the miller opposes the marriage. After some years of waiting the desperate youth goes to the churchyard and sees the spectral train and, following it, the miller.

The drama might have closed here with marriage bells, but it would not be right to let the Austrian youth count on the death of a parent, how ever cruel, so the lover looks again at the spectral company and behind the miller he sees himself. In the course of the year the unfortunate girl loses both her father and her lover.

When one observes these customs it is easy to understand that among many people the belief still survives that the dead have some power over the living, which is often exerted in evil.

TELLING THE STORY

In their country's wondrous story Learned they of the greater glory Yet to be.

And this faith, all else transcending, Bore them onward to the ending—Victory.

Shall this faith find all fruition? Had these souls a holy mission To unfold?

Are the people bravely keeping All their heritage, or sleeping As of old?

Appreciated and Honored. Among the many acts which the Grand Army of the Republic has committed in its half century of organization, none have been more purely inspired by patriotism and high sentiment than this annual testimonial to those who served their country in its time of need. The service of the men who saved the Union was a stern and hard one. It cost many thousands of lives, another myriad of losses of limbs, and years of severe and patriotic services. For the half-century since the war closed the country has annually testified its appreciation and honor for the sacrifices of patriotic men in that struggle.

Death
No more a smile illumines the face,
No more in their accustomed place
Will they appear.
Our comrades dear,
Their mortal clay
Will soon decay
Our friends are dead.

Death:
It cannot be—their frailty
Has put on immortality
And with the sun
Its ages run
Oh blessed thought,
By Jesus bought,
They live.

They live!
In this the present age
Our prayers and hopes presage
Their master's welcome voice
Will bid them all rejoice,
Proclaim the victory won
And to them say "Well done,"
Thou hero.

'Twill last
This nation grand will be
From stain of slavery free.
And to the watching world
With flag of peace unfurled
Will register the day
That o'er these forms of clay
The sounding bugle stirred,
"Lights out" was heard,
In "Caps."

Is done
Thy servants, Lord, obey
Thy call. While we on earth do pray
"Thy will be done."
And may the King, thy Son,
Be near us when we say,
As we lay the forms away
That on these mounds of clay
May friends sweet flowers spray
On each Memorial Day.

GERM OF IMMORTAL ADDRESS

Proof That Lincoln Long Had in Mind
Right Idea of What the War Meant

Hay referred to Browning's suggestion that the North should subjugate the South, exterminate the whites, set up a black republic, and protect the negroes "while they raised our cotton."

"Some of our Northerners seem bewildered and dazzled by the excitement of the hour," Lincoln replied. "This war is to result in the entire abolition of slavery. Old Colonel Hamilton, a venerable and most respectable gentleman, impress upon me most earnestly the propriety of enlisting the slaves in our army." (I told him his daily mail was thickly interspersed with such suggestions.)

"For my own part," he said, "I consider the central idea pervading this struggle is the necessity that is upon us of proving that popular government is not an absurdity. We must settle this question now, whether in a free government the minority have the right to break up the government whenever they choose. If we fail, we will go far to prove the incapability of the people to govern themselves. There may be one consideration used in stay of such final judgment, but that is not for us to use in advance: That is that there exists in our case an instance of a vast and far-reaching disturbing element which the history of no other free nation will probably ever present. That, however, is not for us to say at present. Taking the government as we found it, we will see if the majority can preserve it."

This statement, spoken offhand to his secretary, reveals the foundation of Lincoln's judgment on the Civil war; there was at stake something more precious than the preservation of the Union, something more urgent than the abolition of slavery—and that was democracy. Two years and a half later, in his address at Gettysburg, he put into one imperishable sentence the thought of which this was the germ.—From the Diary of John Hay, edited by William Roscoe Thayer for Harper's Magazine.

LOVE AND DEVOTION

Ceremonies of Memorial Day Remind Youth of Their Duty to Their Country.

Again the thirtieth of May with its flood of memories both sweet and sad. Our national memorial day! Who can fully grasp all that the day means to our population of 100,000,000?

Though he may have scanned the future with a view to divine what would result from the plan he promulgated for Memorial day ceremonies through the order issued forty-seven years ago, there is reason to doubt that Gen. John A. Logan, then the third to hold the office of commander in chief of the Grand Army of the Republic, had an adequate appreciation of what the result would be—of the rich and abundant fruit the tree would yield.

Certain it is that the many thousands of young men in 1863 fresh from service to their country in a thousand cities and villages and marched to cemeteries to lay floral tributes upon the graves of their comrades, had no thought that May 30 would become the nation's most notable day for opening memory's book and recounting deeds of the past, for placing a higher and higher value upon the results of the great war whose many battles had to be fought in order that the nation's life might be preserved.

While we still pay distinctive tribute to the soldier dead, a custom that should never be abandoned, Memorial day does more than that in these days, and it will, let us hope, continue to do more as time passes. Each recurring Memorial day adds to love for and devotion to country that is essential. There never can be an oversupply of such love and devotion. Efforts in that one direction have paid a million times over for all of the trouble and expense of Memorial day ceremonies the last 47 years; the cost of the parades, the millions upon millions of wreaths and potted plants, the addresses and songs, the planting of flags at graves, the patriotic services in thousands of churches the Sunday before the day of memories, the tens of thousands of patriotic demonstrations and addresses in public and other schools.

About the fondest hope that the survivors of the war have upon the downhill journey of life is that all of these patriotic customs will continue.

Another beautiful and impressive custom has become notable, and is moving in harmony with the Grand Army custom of strewing flowers upon the graves of its patriot dead. Multitudes, now, who did not use to do so, go to cemeteries to visit the graves of their dead, and leave blossoms to show that they, too, have been remembered.

The Spirit of Memorial Day

Down the perspective of the years
The purple mists transform the past;
The path along war's blood-red mares,
Blooms bright with fragrant flowers at last.

The echoes of the battle's roar
Are heard no more—
Are heard no more—
But in their stead, the birds overhead
Are singing requiems for our dead—
Requiem and praises for our dead!

The flight of years
Has quenched our tears,
And given us love and hope for fears!

No more our land is rent with strife;
No more does passion blind our eyes;
No more we seek our brother's life,
No more his valor we despise
We hold him at his real worth—
Flower of the earth!

And hand clasps hand through our land;
Brothers united now we stand—
Brothers forever more we stand

The flight of years
Has quenched our tears,
And given us love and hope, for fears!

Marching together, let us bring
Fair wreaths of victory for our dead,
Placing them gently as we sing
Their virtues, o'er each sleeper's head.
What matter whether Blue or Gray?
We're one today—
We're one today!

Old Glory streams in beauteous gleams
Above the nation of our dreams—
One flag, one country—fondest dreams!

The flight of years
Has quenched our tears,
And given us love and hope, for fears!

—William Anwy Jones.

Day Should Always Be Cherished.

The Constitution for which those brave men fought was dearer to them than their lives. It has done more for the amelioration of the conditions of living than any other political system that ever was established on earth. It is right that Memorial day should be cherished not only by the dwindling membership of the Grand Army of the Republic, but by citizens in general—young and old—as a day dedicated to the memory of patriots and the preservation of patriotism.

TO HONOR HIS COMRADES

Then o'er the green mounds where comrades rest,
We scatter love's emblems fair,
And dream of the day when Death's blighting away
Is banished from earth forever.

Peace treads today all the sunlit aisles,
Where the flag of Freedom waves,
O'er each dreamless head of the martyr-dead,
In their flower-strewn peaceful graves.

BILLY'S GREAT DAY

Surely Runaway Youngster's Footsteps Were Guided by a Special Providence.

BILLY had been promised that he should be taken to the cemetery. The blue-coated troops, the booming of the cannon and the grave decorations united in forming a most fascinating occasion for Billy as each Memorial day returned with its sacred associations. Needless to say, he pouted and fretted, and was not at all an ideal Billy when grandma said her head ached too badly to take him. Why did she have to have a headache on Memorial day? Why couldn't Sarah get dressed and take him? Why couldn't he go alone? But grandma was obdurate, and three hours of nursery and toys were prescribed for Billy instead of bright green stretches of marvelous burial ground, thundering of cannon and crowds of wonderful brass-buttoned soldiers.

For an hour Billy engaged in guiding his tin soldiers to a hastily made cemetery, where they shot imaginary guns off over impromptu graves decorated with paper flags. Suddenly a solemn roar penetrated the sunny room. Billy's heart bounded. Five minutes later a chubby figure in gray coat and cap, bareheaded, his gloves being dropped in his haste, let himself quietly out of the front door and made his way to the spot from which the glorious sound had emanated.

He passed in the gates unnoticed, and was soon in the heart of action. How splendid it was! Hundreds of pretty flags and some that were not so pretty. Billy heard a man say that the holes in them had been made by powder and bullets. So many soldiers! So many flowers!

He stood on a grassy mound, a picture of profound attention, brown curls flying in the wind, eyes fastened on the enchanting scene. Suddenly an old gentleman in uniform stepped up and, pinching his cheek, said: "And your name little man?"

"Billy Martin."

The old gentleman echoed the name slowly, shaking as though he had the palsy. "And do you know any of the soldiers?"

"No, but grandpa tell at Apple Maddocks, and grandpa and I always come to celebrate, but she's sick, so I came alone."

Apple Maddocks was rapidly translated in the old man's mind to Appomattox.

"And your father?"

"Haven't any. Haven't any mother—only grandpa."

People passing wondered to see tears raining down the cheeks of the old soldier and wondered still more when, after a few words with one of his comrades, he grasped tightly the hands of the boy, and they passed out together. Billy was an adept at answering questions. A little later an excited child broke into the sanctity of grandma's room with a startling announcement.

"There's a soldier downstairs says he knows you, grandpa; wants you to come right down." Grandpa, all in a flutter, made a hasty toilet and descended.

"Will!"

"Yes, it is indeed I, Margaret. A year in a southern hospital a shattered memory, which only returned after many years; then a weary search made almost hopeless on account of your later marriage. But it has ended happily!"

Billy danced around in a maze of joy. He had a new grandfather, grandma didn't have a headache and—crown of delights—he wasn't going to be scolded for running away.

WAR AND INTERNATIONAL LAW

The deplorable situation resulting from the destruction of the Lusitania raises again the question whether there is any such thing any longer as international law. The libraries and systems of teaching that have grown up under that title seem today to have vanished into thin air.

There are in any collection of human beings a great many who observe laws only from fear of force. Plenty of men would steal and kill did they not fear the penalty. But there is no penalty for breaking international law. An international police force may some day maintain by force the validity of such codes of rules as may be agreed upon, but it may be many years before any such force can be created.

A strong public sentiment is always enormously helpful in maintaining any kind of a code. In business life, law is not the only thing that keeps the banker or the merchant honest. They know that trickery will hurt and perhaps ruin their business. Consequently the great bulk of every day business transaction is square and on the level, not so much from fear of law, as from fear of public sentiment and loss of reputation.

In the matter of keeping national agreements, sentiment seems less well defined. Formerly no nation ever thought of keeping its pledges when they were contrary to its interest. During the past century there has been a decided advance in this particular. But Europe has always scoffed at such promises. When the United States promised to retire from Cuba, few of the foreign diplomats believed the pledge amounted to anything. But it did. Yet there are plenty of people in our country who would favor the breaking of any national pledge, if they felt it would temporarily help American interests.

Here then appears the task of each citizen in the present world catastrophe. It is to do his share to create public sentiment in favor of the most rigid keeping of national agreements. Breaking of international law should become as disgraceful as stealing money from a bank. Let it become a point of honor, to support no man for United States office unless he has a clean record on this world issue.

FOR NATIONAL DAY

Plea is Made That Memorial Observance Be Made General Throughout Country.

FORTY-SEVEN years ago tender and patriotic hearts first consecrated one day to the tear and to the laurel. The grass on the graves of the blue and the gray had shown green but two seasons after the close of the great Civil war when the mournful duty of decking the last resting place of the departed brave formally began.

Since that time the beautiful memorial plan has expanded until now, on the day of the annual remembrance, hundreds of thousands of the living place flowers on the hallowed mounds of hundreds of thousands of dead.

But it is a melancholy fact that while the reverent custom has constantly spread in observance, sectionalism has attended the yearly remembrance, is the comment of Richard G. Conover. Not in the way of narrowness of observance, for both in the North and the South the graves of former enemies have not been forgotten in the local decoration. Blue and gray alike have received their equal quota of respect. It is in the deliberate setting apart of different memorial days that the traces of sectionalism remain. A country united for half a century has not yet fixed a day of common tribute to brave men who died for a principle.

Time Ripe to Unite on Day.
With the coming of the northern Memorial day of 1915 there also comes from veterans and patriotic men and women a desire to unite in one great national holiday every year the task of honoring the Federal and Confederate fighting men who have joined the great majority.

That the time is ripe for the accomplishment of such a fitting project was evidenced at the half century reunion of the blue and gray on the battlefield of Gettysburg. There where they had frantically sought to shed each other's blood fifty years before the grizzled veterans, many on both sides clad in the same uniforms, embraced, drank from the same canteen and reposed at night, shoulder to shoulder, under the same tent.

Any differences there might have been remaining between the living Federals and Confederates were then and there forever banished. On the same day North and South met to pay tribute to valor. In the same way it is proposed now to have the blue and gray, all over the country, mourned annually on the same day.

Their Example Will Live.
It was faith in the great things of life that inspired the soldiers of the nation in the Mexican and Civil wars, and the story of their heroism will be told when their last encampment is a thing of the long ago. And so, while the veterans disband and their associations cease to exist, the inspiration of their example will live and be among the most precious possessions of the nation. And a people which lives up to such examples need not fear for the perpetuity or solidity of American institutions.

Would Make for Perfect Accord.
At no place or spot is the human heart more touched than when bending over a grave. If a spirit of good will and forgiveness is generated at a hallowed spot its influence is far-reaching. If animosities are recalled at the grave, the bitterness is apt to increase. A uniting all over the land on the one day in remembrance of the brave dead starts at the grave the holy work of perfect accord.

GEN. MEADE'S RANK

Writer Thinks He Has Not Been Accorded His Proper Place by Historians.

By J. A. WATROUS.
Lieutenant Colonel U. S. Army (Retired)
HIS great achievements, towering military genius, steadfastness of purpose and his natural and acquired ability successfully to handle vast armies and win great battles, never losing a great battle, placed General Grant at the head of the long list of military heroes developed in the Civil war. He will hold that rank in history for all time.

But what of his lieutenants? It has come to be common in speaking of a few to give rank as follows: Sherman, Sheridan, Thomas and Meade. Other distinguished characters follow, but in this paper their names need not be recalled. Were one to say that Maj. Gen. George Gordon Meade should follow the name of Grant in enumerating important characters in the army one would endanger himself to a mob. But would that be so far out of the way?

The greatest single victory won during the war was achieved under the leadership of Meade. Grant won no single battle that would compare with Gettysburg in importance and its influence in settling the mighty contest. Vicksburg, in its influence, ranked next to Gettysburg. Even Grant conceded that the battle of Gettysburg was of vaster importance and had greater influence in the work of crushing the Confederates than that of Vicksburg. Sherman won no single victory equal to Gettysburg, yet he will always be recognized as one of the greatest generals of his age, and justly stands next to Grant. Sheridan's victories, even the greatest of them, bear no comparison to Gettysburg. Thomas' splendid conduct at

Maj. Gen. George G. Meade.

Chickamauga and his great victory at Nashville will always be regarded as proof of generalship of an exceedingly high type. Yet they were not such victories as Meade won at Gettysburg, under the most trying circumstances—circumstances as depressing almost as those under which Thomas won his greatest battle, that of Nashville.

No one would suggest that the roll be called in this way: Grant, Meade, Sherman, Sheridan and Thomas, or, as I think it should have been called from the start: Grant, Sherman, Meade, Thomas and Sheridan. I am only saying that which I hope will have some bearing in the future toward giving to Meade the high rank his superb services entitled him to—the credit that is his due.

Venerated and Exalted.
Never before was there a Memorial day when so few veterans of the great war needed the proofs given of the underlying loyalty, gratitude and devotion of their countrymen. But never was there a Memorial day when so many Americans who never were soldiers had need of paying this tribute to the men who risked everything and often lost all that the nation might live in safety, power and glory and go on to wider service to the world, leading the march of mankind.
So the balance holds true. The ranks of the heroes are thinned by time, but the millions who reap where they sowed and rejoice in the fruits of their devotion and valor are a mightier host than ever. And in another sense there is an unflinching adjustment of changing conditions. There are fewer survivors of the heroic and terrible four years' struggle for the Union, but they are venerated and exalted as they never were when their ranks were full and their numbers made them a great power in the affairs of the nation.

THE GRAND ARMY.
Hark to the stirring sound
Of fire and drum,
As slowly up the flag-draped streets they Come!
Once more the day rolls round
When, halting, weary, gray and glory-crowned,
These heroes of an epic grand,
These men whose beards were singed by cannon flame,
Who fought the bravest foemen known to fame
Until the glad truce came,
Pass in review before the land,
Memories bitter-sweet and deep
Thrill through the veteran's breast
As, wind-caressed,
The nation's banner waves
Above the peaceful, flower-strewn graves
Where comrades sleep.
Soon they must all be tenting on one ground.
Before they go
"Across the river in the shade to rest,"
"How well that we, their sons, should let
Our hoes know
How honored in our hearts they are and Blessed."
—John E. Dolson, in National Magazine.

WHY IS BAD AIR?

Experts Prove that Overheated Rooms Without Proper Ventilation Produce Serious Physiological Defects.

Air is bad, when it is overheated when it contains an excess of moisture, and when it is chemically contaminated. This is the conclusion of the New York State Commission on Ventilation, as summarized by Prof. C. E. A. Winslow, Chairman, in the official organ of the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis, the Journal of the Outdoor Life.

Professor Winslow shows that while it has been a matter of common belief for a long time that stagnant air was bad for the body, until recently no one knew why this was so. The New York State Commission on Ventilation has definitely proven two counts against bad air, one of them for the first time in history, and will probably prove others later on.

The first indictment against bad air shows that an increase in temperature beyond the normal severity degrees produces serious derangement of the vaso-motor mechanism of the body, resulting in a rise of temperature, increased pulse and a lowered blood pressure, with a corresponding decrease in efficiency, both physical and mental. In addition to this, overheating conduces to an undesirable congestion of the mucous membranes of the nose, thus, possibly paving the way for colds, sore throats, and attacks of various germ diseases.

The work of the Commission proves that chemical accumulation in the air as a result of air pollution, bringing about a decrease in the air for food, which in turn has an unfavorable effect on the entire body. In the Commission's experiments, the people living in that air ate 1 1/2 to 1 3/4 per cent. more than those living in stagnant air.

"These experiments," says Professor Winslow, "indicate that fresh air is needed at all times and in all places. While we have changed our ideas as to what causes bad air, ventilation is just as essential to remove the heat produced by human bodies as it was once thought to be to remove the carbon dioxide produced by human lungs, and it is now proved also to be essential for carrying away chemical products which exert a measurable effect upon the appetite for food. People who live and work in overheated and unventilated rooms are reducing their vitality and rendering themselves an easy prey to all sorts of diseases, such as tuberculosis, pneumonia, grippe, etc."

Church Semi-Oriental.
The Russian church, which terms itself orthodox—pravoslavny—differs considerably from all the other Christian temples by its semi-oriental style—that is half Tartar, half Byzantine, yet possesses its distinctly Slavonic element. With its gilded cupolas, bright-colored roofs and ornaments, white glaring walls, it has more of a mythologic and legendary character than the stately gothic or romanesque cathedrals.
